When one encounters a simple token with only a few letters it is usually beyond the realm of possibility to attribute the issuer. In this case there was the L & M C.; but on the reverse was the maker's mark. It read....J.D.MATTHEWS / 72 3rd Ave / PITTSBURGH. This would identify the likely vicinity where the merchant had his business, and the maker's address will further narrow the time frame when the token was struck. After locating the plausible business in 1882, I worked my way back to the earliest sign of existence. In 1866-67 there was a flour and feed dealer named Henderson, Laing, & Averys on Second Avenue. Henry M Henderson went it alone in 1869, and Lang & McKinney were also doing business on their own. The following year it became Lang & McKallip who were coal dealers at 358 Penn Ave. in Pittsburgh. In 1872 they moved to 347 Liberty. They expanded their products to include coal, grain, flour, and cement; and later built a grain elevator and chopping mill at 31st and the Allegheny Valley R. R. tracks. The principals in this business were George Laing of Hiland Avenue and L. S. McKallip who lived at 26 Fulton St. In 1880 J.D. Matthews first began doing business at 72 3rd Ave., the address on the token. In 1884 the company name changed to Laing & Davison and they continued to handle the building supplies, but no longer handled agricultural products. In the year 1887 Laing became president of Penna. Manufacturing, Mining & Supply Co., and the L.S. McKallip & Co. located at 12th and Pike sold all the above shown items. There are five different value numbers shown on the tokens, including 10, 20, 25, 35 and 50. Evidence points to this token being issued between 1880 and 1883. Brass 23 mm

Book Review:

Catalog of Pennsylvania Encased Coins

by Rich Bottles Jr.

If you haven't picked up your copy of the "Catalog of Pennsylvania Encased Coins," you may want to contact author Vic Nolan before the 1st Edition sells out. The 119-page catalog lists hundreds of encased pennies from the state of Pennsylvania, and was co-authored by Richard A. Gaetano (who first listed encased coins from Allegheny County PA as part of a WPNS project) and Herman M Aqua (who is finishing up PA's first book on tokens).

The catalog is set up as a check list and is broken down by city, with all known encased coins from each town listed under the city name (including all known lettering varieties and all known dates/mintmarks of the coins). The catalog covers the usual round and horseshoe style aluminum encased pennies, along with older and rarer encasements, such as chamberpot-shaped & bear-shaped, celluloid buttons & celluloid mirrors, and encased-coin denominations other than cents.

If you have an encased coin that doesn't have a city name and you're not sure whether it's from Pennsylvania, there's an alphabetical listing of maverick merchant names in the back that will direct you to the appropriate city where the token is listed. There's also some helpful advice on how to detect whether an encased coin has been replaced in an attempt to make it appear original (including the dates of the coins in the listings is also helpful in determining whether a coin is original or not, since the person attempting to replace a missing coin would probably not know what date of coin to place into an encasement).

You can contact the author by writing to: Vic Nolan, P.O. Box 101850, Pittsburgh, PA 15237.

Book Review

by Rich Bottles Jr.

Until this year, one of the states richest in exonomia still had no book dedicated specifically to its known merchant tokens, but this summer ended the drought and filled the void for a standard numismatic reference on Pennsylvania merchant tokens.

After years of cataloging and researching trade tokens and merchant tokens from the Commonwealth, veteran exonomist Herman M. "Doc" Aqua published his "Pennsylvania Merchant Tokens" book this year through Michigan Exonomia Publishers. Spanning hundreds of towns and including numerous types of tokens (such as good-fors, brewery checks, advertising storecards, good luck pieces, military issues, drink chips, coal script, prison money, amusement/video tokens and car wash tokens...), Aqua's book logs in at over 1250 pages of useful information.

The format is separated by municipality name, and the tokens for each town/city are then listed alphabetically by the first letters on the obverse of the token. The mavericks are then covered in the appendix, where the merchant name is referenced to the city in which the token is attributed. Each token listing is given a rarity-rating from R-1 to R-7, and each listing is given a reference number.

These new Aqua reference-numbers are already becoming widely accepted and are appearing in ads and in online auctions, such as eBay, which is an indication that this book will evolve into a crucial resource for those of us who collect PA exonomia.

Of course, it's possible to collect Pennsylvania exonomia without a standard reference, as many of us have been doing for years, trying to keep mental notes on scarcity and attributions, but Aqua's book helps put this localized hobby of ours into perspective and allows us to compare and document these mental notes in an organized way along side of Aqua's work.

Organization is the main benefit that I have personally experienced from using Aqua's book. It served as an incentive to get my collection in order, as I compared my tokens to the listings within the book. No longer do I have to search through numerous boxes and cabinets, trying to confirm whether I have a specific token or not, since Aqua's book prompted me to dig everything out and put it all together in an organized fashion. Subsequently, I found that I have a lot of duplicates, which were the result of needless purchases of tokens that I already owned, but had forgotten about because they were never properly organized.

Did I find a lot of unlisted tokens when comparing my collection to the listings in the book? Most of you already know the answer to this question, especially if you've collected Pennsylvania exonomia for awhile. Basically, no one could have written a book of this magnitude and scope without there being a number of tokens missed which would otherwise qualify for inclusion.

Although he reached out for the assistance of scores of collectors in an attempt to publish a catalog that was as complete as possible, I believe Aqua would be the first to admit the futility of trying to create a perfectly complete cataloging effort. This philosophy can be seen in his decision to include plastic tokens, which are constantly being issued and re-issued in bars and clubs across the state, and in his Preface warning to collectors that "Caution must be exercised when non-listed tokens are offered."

He also requests correspondence from collectors for error-corrections and for reports of unlisted tokens/varieties at: Herman M. Aqua, 100 Dunn St., Forty Fort, PA 18704. This address can also be used to purchase the book.
